Nursing for Women's Health reports on evidence-based best practice and emerging practice trends in women's health, obstetric, and neonatal nursing. The tone of this award-winning journal is practical and reader-friendly, while upholding high standards for scholarship. The following types of manuscripts are sought:

- Clinically focused original research (qualitative and quantitative)
- Literature reviews
- Quality improvement projects
- Practice innovations and trends
- Case studies
- Health care policy, legislative, or advocacy articles
- Commentaries
- Personal essays for our “Reflections” department

Topics sought include but are not limited to:

WOMEN’S HEALTH
- Adolescent health
- Autoimmune disease
- Cancer
- Cardiovascular health
- Eating disorders
- Genitourinary health
- Health care for veterans
- Infectious diseases
- Menopause
- Mental health
- Obesity
- Sexually transmitted infections
- Substance use disorders
- Violence against women

NEWBORN & NEONATAL
- Breastfeeding and infant nutrition
- Family-centered care
- Genetic disorders and syndromes
- Hyperbilirubinemia
- Infectious disease
- Late preterm infants
- Long-term outcomes
- NICU environment
- Palliative care
- Rethinking common interventions
- Safe infant sleep

CHILDBEARING FAMILIES
- Antepartum hospitalization
- Care for vulnerable populations
- Chronic illness in pregnancy
- Genetics
- Infertility and reproductive technology
- Intrapartum care and outcomes
- Maternal/newborn care
- Maternal obesity
- Obstetric emergencies
- Pain management
- Parenting
- Preterm labor
- Regionalization/stabilization and transport

GENERAL ISSUES
- Clinical tools and measures
- Health care policy
- Global health issues
- Information technology
- Innovations in education
- Legal, ethical, and cultural issues
- Measurement of nursing practice outcomes
- Population health
- Rural and urban health care issues
- Safety for clinicians and patients
- Translation of research findings

Prospective authors can find our Guidelines for Authors at nwhjournal.org
Editorial inquiries can be directed to nwh@awhonn.org